

Everything has two sides and working in multiple careers is not an exception. In the past it seemed not a normal method to gather income, yet today many people support it.

We must acknowledge that people need more money in order to fulfill all their wants. Therefore, by working in more than one field the number of money that could be earned is become increasing. In addition, people who works in several job fields would be had more experiences than others. For example, someone who is working as a programmer in the morning till evening and teaching for piano after it could be a multi-talent one.

However, most people with several jobs will lose much of their time especially if those jobs are being done every day. Furthermore, people who lack of rest time will never able to enjoy their life. Thus, stress will become easier to felt by them. Scientifically, time to sleep that is needed by human normally is 6 to 8 hours a day. Also, due to earn more income people can take higher degree in their field to support their career to get better position that will infect the amount of their income.

To conclude with, having more than one job would be made people richer yet, lest of private time. In my view it better to have only one career that can be expend it by getting more degree in my field.
